

Indigenous Business Resilience Program #iNTBlack

Tagai Management Consultants (TMC) is proud to announce the NT 'In the Black' Indigenous Business Resilience Program (the Program) in partnership with Charles Darwin University (CDU) – Northern Institute and supported by the Northern Territory (NT) Government and other NT business support enablers will go live on Monday, 27 July 2020.

The twelve (12) week Program focuses on business support for established NT Indigenous businesses from a culturally contextualised perspective. The program harnesses the innovation and local expertise of highly experienced NT Indigenous business leaders and business support hubs.

An integral element of the Program will be TMC working in conjunction with the Northern Territory Indigenous Business Network (NTIBN) and NTIBN identified SME's to deliver a suite of relevant local business virtual sessions.

This unique Program will be delivered virtually and will draw on specific areas of business targeting Indigenous business sustainability, innovation and resilience.

The Program will aim to create the following benefits (at a minimum):

- ▷ Provide business information and advice for no cost to local NT Indigenous businesses;
- ▷ Utilise local Indigenous business knowledge and experience;
- ▷ Encourage collaborative sharing of knowledge and experience amongst Territorian Indigenous businesses; and
- ▷ Contribute to the evolution of engagement between Territorian Indigenous businesses and communities with the NT Government, NTIBN, CDU and other key Program stakeholders.

Due to the COVID-19 restrictions the Program will be delivered through various platforms and services.

The Program goal is to provide a collaborative community platform for all NT Indigenous businesses to share, learn and network in order to strengthen business resilience and innovation to actively contribute to NT economic recovery.

For further information contact the In the Black program team via email at info@tagaimc.com.